THE CHALLENGE

Outside of Sudbury, residential construction along Northern Ontario's Wanapitei Lake has been blossoming in recent years. Lakeside activities in the summer months draw Canadians from many provinces—yet frigid winters mean home exteriors require a robust and durable solution to survive the winter months.

This was the challenge set forth by new homeowners in the area that wanted a beautiful home with a textured and dark finish across various materiality. However, it was their desire for dark, elegant stonework that required special attention.

Local manufactured stone provider Bradstone was commissioned to create much of the home's exterior siding. Prefabricated stone elements were formed off-site and shipped to the lakeside retreat for installation.

Bradstone's work provided the texture and naturalism the homeowners desired, but a long-lasting color solution would be needed to finalize the look and turn gray stone into the beautiful, textured stonework required for the project.

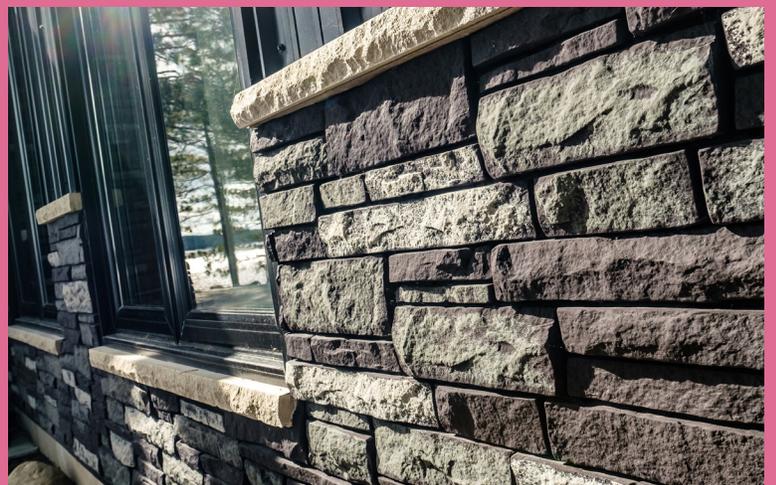

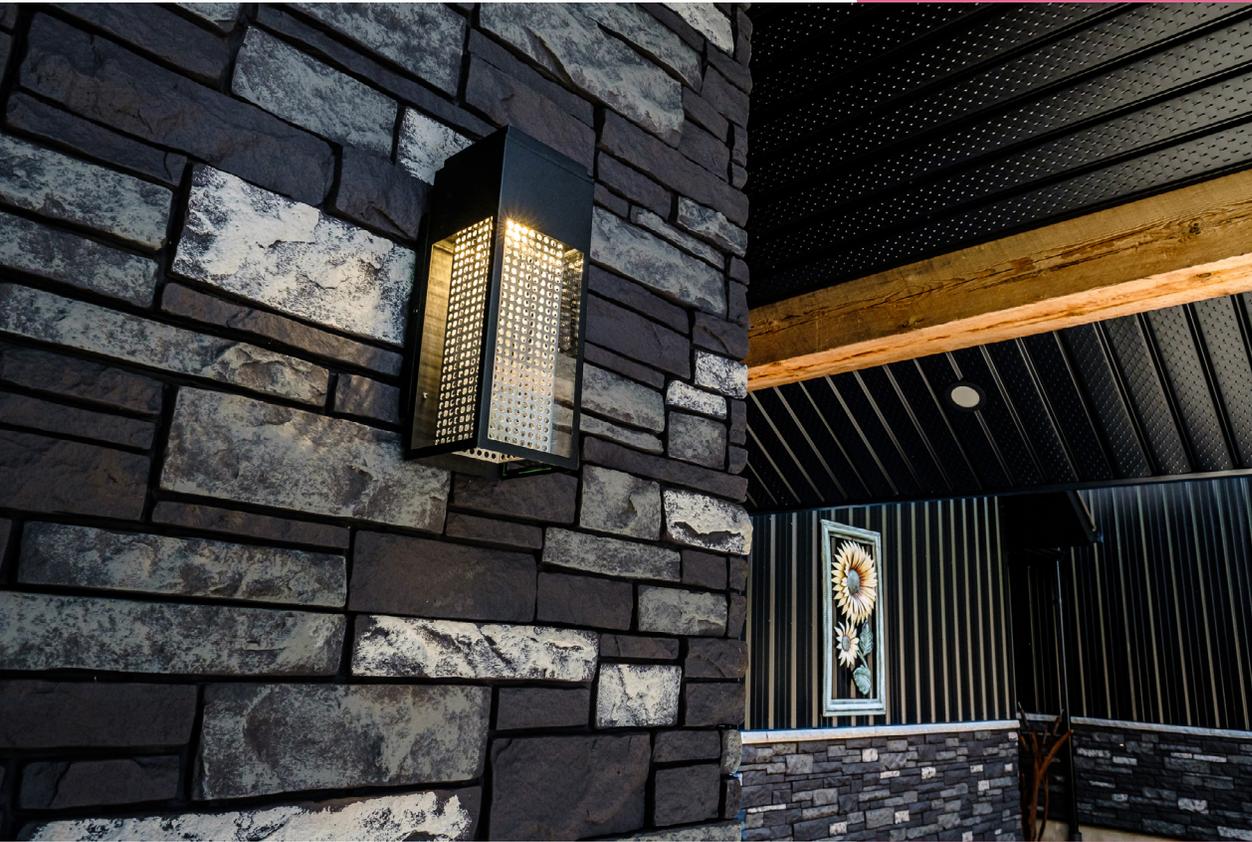

THE SOLUTION

To meet homeowner expectations and finalize their work, Bradstone called in Nawkaw to provide the textured, dark stonework finish specified. Nawkaw's expert stain technicians first applied a two-tone, textured finish of the flagship NawTone product as a sample, which was later approved. This finish combined not only shades of black and gray but worked in harmony with the pre-existing shade of gray on the stonework paneling. The final effect is a beautiful, textured pattern that appears in a myriad of shades.

Nawkaw's finished work elevates the property's beauty and the collective work of other contracted teams across the home's materiality. Furthermore, Nawkaw's warrantied work here can easily withstand freezing Canadian winters and inclement weather conditions for 25 years.

Nawkaw is proud to work with industry partners such as Bradstone to help homeowners realize their visions and enjoy a sustainable and durable color solution.
